A Strong Armed Widow

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1913, by Associated Literary Press

The town of Grahamsville was a slow town. All the day said so, and its citizens readily admitted it.

There was never any need for haste in Grahamsville. Hanks did there now and then, but there was always lots of time for holding the funeral.

When this slow and conservative state of affairs had continued for many years the Widow Cameron struck the town, and struck it hard.

The Widow Cameron was forty years old and tall as a rawboned. She had a decisive commanding way with her. She was business. She might have come from Australia or a town only twenty miles away.

Just what the Widow Cameron was going to do was soon public property. She had an acre of ground with the house, and she put 450 chickens at work scratching up the soil and two incubators working overtime. She built her own coops and wire fences.

A roar went up. There had been a time in the history of Grahamsville when every householder had his chickens and his best of eggs, but the crowing of roosters had awakened the people hours ahead of time, and by common consent all fowls had been banished. No crows nor clucks nor cackles for the past ten years, and here was the Widow Cameron breeding thousands of them!

Something must be done. Squire Johnson must wait on her and tell her she can't keep chickens.

"Of course she can't," said the squire as he started for the widow's house to lay down the rules to her.

"Oh, I can't, eh?" she replied to his oratory.

"No, madam. We are very strict on that point."

"You and the rest of the folks can go to grass."

One of the ministers called to wrestle with her. She held the door against him while he said:

"Madam, our good people are very much exercised over the fact, the fact—"

"That I am raising chickens," she finished. "Well, you tell your good people that if they any much more I will sell my fowls and go to raising skunks for their fur and life!"

Not another objection came from a citizen. No one was hankering to exchange chickens for skunks.

If they kept no hens in Grahamsville they did keep hogs and cows. The animals could run at large and feed themselves.

The widow Cameron gave public notice through the county papers that the owner of any hog cow that trespassed upon her property would hear something drop.

"She can't mean it!" men said to each other. "Why, our animals have always run at large."

Mr. Schermerhorn's cow broke her way in one night, and at daylight she heard something drop. It was one of her horns. The owner wanted damages, but was told to go to.

Mr. Todd's big spotted hog roamed his way in and got a broken back for his pains. His owner was just foolish enough to call on the widow and try to collect $5 in cash, and it was over the fence for him.

Solomon Price was a widower who wanted a second wife. Why not capture the Widow Cameron and her chickens and real estate and the money she must have in the bank? Good thing, except that Solomon had had no experience courting widows. Some one had told him that the first move to be made was to chuck the poor thing under the chin. He began that way. In return he received a right hand swing that fractured his jaw, and he went out of the house followed by a No. 8 calfskin shoe.

A tin peddler came along and sold the Widow Cameron some leaky utensils and got away before she discovered the cheat. A week later he returned to the village and was waylaid by his victim and had both eyes put in mourning.

There was a great jangling of three church bells on Sunday forenoons. It was to warn the people that Saturday had passed and Sunday had come and such of the population as cared to could hear a sermon at one of the three churches. No guarantee as to whether the sermon would be good, bad or indifferent.

The widow didn't like the jangling, and she got out an injunction and had the bells silenced.

There were dogs in Grahamsville—many dogs. They had come to realize that they must not disturb the peace by fighting. They could growl and bristle as they passed by, but there must be no conflicts to determine which was the better dog. The Widow Cameron went about encouraging dogs of every breed to stand up for their rights and to fight at the drop of the hat. It got so there was a scrap every half hour.

What the Widow Cameron didn't do to the town of Grahamsville could not be told in columns. She woke it up. She bossed it. She terrorized it. She made it over into a rapid town. When it was realized that trade was increasing, strangers coming in and that a railroad was a probability a public meeting was called, and the citizens subscribed $4,000 and bought the widow out and saw that she left the town.

And yet as she went she kicked Hiram Belsee in the shins for cheating her on a load of wood and also cursed Moses Dewberry up to a peak for saying that she couldn't get married if she had a million dollars back of her.

Of the population of Hungary, more than seventy per cent is engaged in agricultural pursuit.

NOTICE OF SALE OF REAL ESTATE

Pursuant to a decree of the Circuit Court of Harrison County, West Virginia, made and entered on the 24th day of May, 1913, in the chancery cause of Wellington Morris versus Benjamin Morris and others, I will on Tuesday, August the 5th, 1913, at the front door of the Court House in Harrison County, West Virginia, at 2 o'clock P. M. of that day, offer for sale to the highest bidder the following described real estate—all that certain tract and parcel of land lying on Flinderation Run, a branch of Salem Fork of Ten Mile Creek, in Ten Mile District, Harrison County, West Virginia, and bounded as follows, to-wit: Beginning at a chestnut oak corner to Wirt Hickman, and running S. 80 E. 42 poles to a white oak; S. 45 E. 135 poles to a white oak; S. 67 1/2 W. 67 poles to a dogwood, gum and poplar; S. 45 W. 45 1/2 poles to a chestnut oak on ridge; N. 60 W. 75 poles to a chestnut oak; N. 24 W. 65 poles to a white oak; N. 66 W. 21 poles to a ridge; N. 16 W. 20 poles to a gum; N. 60 E. 63 1/2 poles to a hickory on ridge; S. 77 1/2 E. 13 poles to the beginning, containing 111 acres be it more or less, it being the same tract and parcel of land as that conveyed by Minter J. Holden and wife to James E. Morris by deed bearing date July 30, 1903, and of record in the office of the Clerk of the County Court of Harrison County in Deed Book No. 138, at page 84.

TERMS OF SALE: One-third of the purchase price thereof to be paid cash on day of sale, and the residue to be paid in two equal installments in one, and two years from date of sale. If the purchaser fails to execute his note for deferred payments with personal security to be approved by the undersigned commissioner.

A vendor's lien is to be retained on the land sold to secure the deferred payments.

The Pittsburgh vein and stratum of coal and the oil and gas within and underlying said tract of land will be reserved and excepted from this sale.

J. E. LAW,

Special Commissioner.

I, I. Wade Coffman, Clerk of the Circuit Court of Harrison County, West Virginia, hereby certify that bond with security approved by me as sufficient and in the penalty provided by said decree has been given by said special commissioner.

I. WADE COFFMAN,

Clerk of the Circuit Court of Harrison County.
